in the Chamber of Deputies. The first train left Paris at 10:52 o'clock Saturday morning and jumped the rails near Uzerche, thirty-one miles southeast of Limoges. Five persons were killed in this wreck and twenty wounded. Owing to the wreckage the express train leaving Paris at 7:25 P. M. was diverted to another road at Perigeux Junction. It went into the ditch a few miles beyond that place.

Many employers, resenting Giolitt's new policy, although not involved in the strikes, locked out their workers. On two occasions the Premier sought and received votes of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies.

There was also considerable opposition to Giolitt's plan to reduce the Italian budget deficit, which was part of a policy of rigid governmental economy he had proposed. The Socialists also questioned the attitude he had taken in the London discussions of the German reparations.
